FEBRUARY MEETING
February 19, 2009, 7:00 pm
Sweet Sue's Family Resturant
SPEAKER: Evault Boswell
TOPIC: A Collection of Confederate Memories

From the Commander

The history of Valentine's Day dates back to the third century when Claudius II, a Roman priest, was beheaded for helping Christians. On the eve of his beheading he sent a note to a friend and signed it "from your Valentine." The day was February 14.

Although somewhat popular, Valentine's Day in this country did not become popular until the Civil War. Again, it was the first time in America, North and South, that the majority of the men and women were separated by War. Harpers Weekly, a popular newspaper during the time, published a Valentine edition on February 20, 1864. It featured an incredible illustration of life during that period with women making Valentines, angelic children delivering Valentines to the soldiers, and the soldiers reading them around camp fires. During that time commercial cards were scarce, but there were Valentine Writers, small booklets published to help in writing a Valentine note to your loved ones. As our ancestors did in the past, remember your Valentine this year!

I want to remind everyone to check the upcoming events in the Dispatch. Remember Camp Ford coming in March. This event really puts our camp and our community on the map, so we need a good turnout. Let us all try to get more involved in camp activities this year and make our camp the best in the Brigade. After all, when you support the camp, you are supporting the memory and cause of your ancestors.

Yours in the Cause,
Dan Horton, Commander
God Bless the South and God Bless Texas!

February Program

Guest speaker for the February 19th program is the renowned author, Evalt Boswell from Greenville, Tx. and his topic is "A Collection of Confederate Memories."

From humorous to heart breaking, his program will contain stories told by the men who were there, in their own words. From the shelling of Corpus Christi, Texas, with shells filled with whiskey to the story of E.I. Kellie, who slept with a corpse. His talks include stories of accounts of the men who fought for the South including Yankee prison experiences and hardships on the battlefields.

His objective is to tell the true story of the struggle that tore the nation asunder and to preserve for generations to come that true history. Furthermore, for those who would change history or alter it to meet their own agenda, they are advised that heritage violations will not erase the memory of the men, both blue and gray, who fought in that awful war.

Cliff Johnson
1st Lt. Commander

From the Adjutant

The camp has two new members on our roster, pushing the current count to 83. We want to welcome Dennis and Quenten Kinard to our camp. Be sure and attend the meeting on the 19th to see these two new members inducted into our camp.

The camp now has eight votes at the Division Reunion in June. I want to encourage camp members to attend the meeting in Waco. With Waco being less than a three-hour drive, you can make this a one-day trip and participate in the events. Mark June 12-14 on your calendars for this event.

The Camp ended 2008 in solid financial shape. Our largest expense is the cost to print and mail the Douglas Dispatch - about two dollars per member per month. I would encourage anyone who can receive the Dispatch by e-mail to do so.

See you at the meeting on the 19th!

God Bless Dixie!
Cooper Goodson, Jr.
Adjutant

Brigade News

Compatriots:

I am proud to report that the East Texas Brigade is alive, well and growing. I attended the organization meetings for the new Palestine and Center camps. These camps should be chartered in the next couple of months. The people at both camps are enthused and ready to help protect and expand the Southern Cause in our Brigade. We need to be ready to help them in any way they need and be sure to welcome them at our events and functions.

The Texas Division Reunion will be in Waco, June 13 and 14th. We need to fill our delegate count. We will be electing new Brigade officers and need the votes. It is also a good way to see the workings of the Division and keep up to date on what is happening. The National Reunion will be in Hot Springs, Arkansas, July 22-25. This is about as close as we will see a National Reunion and will be a good chance for some to attend. If you have any questions, please contact Commander Horton or myself, and we will try to help.

There are several things in the works (some good, some bad) that I will cover with you as they develop. Needless to say, our Southern Cause and general rights may be under attack more than ever. I won't talk politics since that is not my place, but I ask you each to get involved and let your good conscience guide you. We need ALL Americans with good sense now more than ever. The Douglas Camp has the finest group of men I have been associated with in a long time, and I am sure you will do the right things.

LONG LIVE THE SOUTH!

OUR TROOPS!

The Richard B. Hubbard Chapter of the Military Order of the Stars and Bars held its 2nd annual Lee-Jackson Birthday Party at Josephs Catering on January 24, 2009, in Tyler, Texas. We were treated to a southern dinner of Chicken Fried Steak and all the trimmings. Several nice door prizes including a Navy Colt Replica were given away. We were entertained with period music by the "Three Majors." Approximately 45 fellow compatriots and Southerners celebrated the birthday of these two Confederate leaders and heroes. If the good Lord is willing, we will do it again next year. If you have an ancestor that was an officer in the Confederate army or navy or served in the Confederate government, you are eligible for membership in the MOS & B. If you have any questions regarding membership, please contact me or any member of the MOS & B.

Very Sad News

It is with a very heavy heart that we inform you of the passing of Compatriot Gene Kinsey on Saturday, January 10, 2009. Gene was the Commander of William H.L. Wells Camp #1588, Plano, Texas, and Commander of the 4th Brigade. Gene was a tireless worker for the Sons of Confederate Veterans and the Cause.

Gene was one of the organizers of the Raid on Camp Ford--the Battle at Jones Meadow. He worked tirelessly to make this a successful event for Camp Ford, Tyler, East Texas and the reenacting community. His goal was to make this the largest event in Texas.

A memorial service was held for family and friends on January 14th in Plano.

A special memorial service for reenactors will be held at Jones Meadow on February 28th. Gene loved this event and poured his heart and soul into it. We can show our respect and love for Gene and Sue Ann by attending. More info will follow.

GENE WILL BE MISSED BY ALL WHO KNEW AND LOVED HIM!!!!

In lieu of flowers, the family has requested donations be sent to the SCV c/o Cody Marshall, Adjutant, or the Texas Civil War Museum, another of his loves.

In Honor of Valentine Day

Two letter are presented to you in honor of Valentine's Day. (Transcribed as written.) The first love letter was written by Harvey Black in Brandy Station, Virginia, to his wife, Mary (Mollie). He recounts their courtship and expresses his great love for her.

Brandy Station,
Sunday night, Nov. 1 [1863]

My dear Mollie

I rcd a letter today from a very handsome lady to play cupid. Although not accompanied by her likeness yet her image was so indelibly impressed upon my mind that the likeness itself could not recall the features more vividly than they are impressed. I first met her in a village in Western Va when I was about 17 years old and she 8. I afterwards saw her frequently and occasionally was in her company, and notwithstanding the disparity of our ages, I became so favorably impressed with her fair face and gentle manners that I frequently said to myself that I wished she was older or I younger.

In 3 to 4 years she had grown so much that the disparity in age seemed to grow less. Never did a lady witness the budding of a flower with more requisite pleasure than did I the budding of that pretty little girl into womanhood. She made much of my thoughts while in Mexico and more upon my return home. While at the University of Va., I not infrequently found my thoughts wandering from the dry textbook to contemplate by the aid of memory the features and form of this little girl.

After I completed my studies, I traveled in the west and expected to find a home in some western state, but not finding a place to suit me, together with the persuasions of that fair face, induced me to return. I entered, as you know, actively into the pursuit of my profession with the determination to make at least a fair reputation and tried to withdraw my thought from everything else, but I found this little fairy constantly and pleasantly intruding into all my plans, whether of pleasure or interest. At this period she met me politely and respectfully but seemed to grow more distant, coy & reserved, so that I frequently thought that even the ordinary attentions of common politeness & courtesy were no special source of pleasure to her.

In a few instances when she has arrived at about the age of 15 this shyness and reserve seemed to be forgotten, and I would pass an hour or two in the enjoyment of her company with great pleasure to myself and I imagined with at least satisfaction, if not enjoyment, to her. I began to think that my happiness was identified with hers. I began to pay her special visits or at least seek opportunities by which I might be in her company. I sought her society on pleasure rides and thought it not a hardship to ride 65 miles in 24 hours if part of the time might be spent with her. She always exhibited or observed the decorum of modest reserve which might be construed into neither encouragement nor discouragement.

After the deliberation & reflection which I thought due to a matter which involved my happiness for life, I felt that her destiny and mine were probably intended to be united, and that all the adverse counsel which I could give myself could bring no objections. I felt that I ought both as a matter of duty and happiness give my whole life to her, who for 9 years had my attention and devotion, though concealed love.

After a few little billets and interviews, and with a full declaration of the love I desired to bestow, I received a measured and loving response and was made most happy in the anticipation of the celebration of the nuptials fixed at some 6 months hence. This time glided nicely & happily, though not too rapidly, away from me. The hours of leisure were spent with her and my visits were always welcomed with that cordial welcome, that maiden modesty, so much to be admired. 'Tis true that on one occasion she did rest her elbow upon my knee and look with confidential pleasure in my face and made me realize that indeed I had her whole heart.

Suffice it to say, the happy day of our marriage arrived and since then, hours, days, and years of time, confidence & happiness passed rapidly away, and only to make us feel that happy as were the hours of youthful days, they compare not with those of later years and perhaps even these may not be equal to that which is in reserve for us.

I don't know how much pleasure it affords you to go over these days of the past, but to me they will ever be remembered as days of felicity. And how happy the thought that years increase the affection & esteem we have for each other to love & be loved. May it ever be so, and may I ever be a husband worthy of your warmest affections. May I make you happy and in so doing be made happy in return. A sweet kiss and embrace to your greeting.

But maybe you will say it looks ridiculous to see a man getting grayhaired to be writing love letters, so I will use the remnant of my paper otherwise...

Yours affectionately H Black

A letter from JC Morris in camp near Lanjer, Arkansas to his wife, Amanda. Morris was in the 21st Texas Cavalry, Company F.

Camp near Lanjer, Ark.
May 10th 1863.

My Dear Amanda,

It has been a long time since I had an opportunity of writing to you, and I gladly avail myself of the present opportunity. I am not certain that I will have a chance of sending this but I will write a few lines any how and try and get it off to let you know that I am among the living.

We have been on a raid into Ms. but I have not time to give you the particulars of our trip. I will write in a few days if I can get a chance to send it and write you a long one. I just came off of picket and found the boys all writing to send by a man that has been discharged who is going to start home this morning. I was quite sick three or four days while in Mo. but have entirely recovered. We captured a good many prisoners while in Mo. and killed a good many. We went up as high as Jackson 8 or 10 miles above Cape Girardeau. We fought them nearly all day at the Cape on Sunday two weeks ago today. The yanks boasted that we would never get back to Ark but they were badly mistaken, for we are back again and have sustained but very light loss, we never lost a man out of our company and only one or two out of the regt. I wish I had time to give you a full description of our trip. It would be very interesting to you I know; but you will have to put up with this little scrawl for the present. I am in hopes that I will get a whole package of letters from you in a few days. I never wanted to see you half as bad in all my life as I do now. I would give anything in the world to see you and the children. I have no idea when I will have that pleasure. We can't get any news here - do not know what is going on in the outside world. The boys will all write as soon as they get a chance to send them off.

We will remain in this vicinity, I expect for some time to recruit our horses. Our horses are sadly worsted. We found plenty to eat and to feed our horses on in Mo but hardly even had time to feed or eat as we traveled almost insesantly night and day. We could get any amount of bacon of the very best kind at 10 cts and every thing else in proportion.

I must close for fear I do not get to send my letter off. Write often I will get them some time. I will write every chance, do not be uneasy when you do not get letters, for when we are scouting around as we have been it is impossible to write or to send them off if we did write. Give my love to the old Lady and all the friends. My love and a thousand kisses to my own sweet Amanda and our little boys. How my heart yearns for thou that are so near and dear to me. Goodbye my own sweet wife, for the present. Direct to Little Rock as ---.

As ever your devoted and loving Husband, J.C. Morris.

A Big Difference Between Confederates and Yankees

By Daryl Coleman

There are many powerful scenes in the movie Gods and Generals, but one in particular stands out in my mind. Robert E. Lee is looking out over the town of Fredericksburg, Va., from a nearby hilltop. Pointing out its significance, he turns to Lt. Col. Walter H. Taylor, his aide-de-camp, and says, "That is where I met my wife. It's something these Yankees do not understand, will never understand. You see these rivers, valleys and streams, fields and even towns. They're just markings on a map to those people in the war office in Washington. To us, oh my goodness man, they're birthplaces and burial grounds; they're battlefields where our ancestors fought. They're places where we learned to walk, to talk, to pray. They're places where we made friendships and fell in love. They're the incarnation of all our memories, Mr. Taylor, and all that we are, all that we are."

I feel the exact same way, and I must confess that in my case, it is kind of strange. To explain, I am a first generation Texan who never lived in Georgia, where my father grew up. Where he grew up, they were there in that place for about 100 years prior to his birth in 1929. When I go there, I feel like I belong, in a sense, even though I never lived there, in Henry County and Spalding County Georgia. There is a Methodist Church cemetery outside of Griffin, Georgia, and I love going there, because I am related to well over half of all the folks buried there. So, I tell people that it is my cemetery, even though it is not specifically a family cemetery. I have great grandparents buried there, and it goes all the way back to 4th great grandparents and lots of cousins buried there. My own father grew up just 200 yards from this cemetery, and the road there is named Coleman Road, so that is, in a manner of speaking, my place, and for that I have a sense of pride in it, though I never lived there. I feel connected, as I do to several other places in Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia.

So, what is my point? Well, in our modern urban society, this either has completely gone away, or is going away. And it is my feeling that with a good many Yankees, this was true earlier than it was for Southerners, because the South remained mainly rural and agrarian for a longer period.

So, what do I wish for you to take away from this? I think many of you probably know of at least one place like I mentioned, where your family was just all over it, for many years. I want to suggest that you treasure that place, and come to know it well. As Lee said, places like that are the incarnation of all our memories, all that we are. To me, that's special.

Letter from Governor Richard B. Hubbard

TYLER REPORTER, April 11, 1861, page 2, column 5

Letter from Col. R. B. Hubbard.
The following private letter from Col. R. B. Hubbard, contains interesting details of affairs at Austin. The Col. will pardon us for taking the liberty of its publication:

Austin, Texas, March 24, 1861.

James P. Douglas, Esq.,

My Dear Sir:

I embrace this opportunity of writing you a short letter, by our fellow-citizen, Col. Jones, who leaves to-morrow for Tyler. He will inform you more particularly than I can in the limits of a hurriedly written letter, of the acts of the Convention. Suffice it to say, that General Houston, failing and refusing to take the oath prescribed by the Convention, incidental to and demanded by our change of government, the office of Governor was declared to be vacated. Lieut. Gov. Clark now fills the Gubernatorial chair de facto and de jure.—The Legislature recognizes the act of the Convention, by holding official communication with the late Lt. Governor as the present Executive of Texas. The Convention has left to the Legislature all matters of legislation over which the State Constitution gives it legislative power, and has very properly abstained from any interference with the province of the Legislature, and made no changes in the organic law, except such as were called for by the act of secession. What changes were made, I think, will commend themselves to the country, as eminently necessary and proper. The most important act of that body was the ratification of the Permanent Constitution of the Confederate States. The Convention wisely, I think, took the responsibility of doing this, and their action, I am confident, will be approved by the whole State. That instrument, which you have doubtless seen ere this, is all that the advocates of States rights and the lovers of republican government could demand. All the clauses in the old Federal Constitution of doubtful construction have been stricken out, and we have presented to us a compact which secures, for all time, liberty and equality, and whose provisions may be understood and appreciated by the humblest citizen of the Republic. You have seen that Texas, under that Constitution, is entitled to six Representatives in the Congress of the Confederate States. it will become the duty of the present Legislature to divide the State into six Congressional Districts which will be done at an early day, and upon the basis of the late census.

Inasmuch as the Congress of the Confederate States, under the permanent Constitution, does not convene until December next, and Senators will not be elected until the "regular" meeting of the Legislature, which takes place in the month of November. The permanent Constitution requires that elections for Senators shall be held at the first regular session of the Legislature next preceding the meeting of Congress.

Much business of importance to the State devolves upon the present Legislature. The State, though her resources are vast, is in debt, and the expense of protecting our exposed borders, incident to our change of government, has been necessarily great. This embarrassment will be, however, temporary in its character, and the debt incurred will ere long be doubtless assumed by the Confederate States. president Davis has already ordered the raising of one regiment for our frontier protection, and the men are now being enlisted for that service. The Convention has also provided for an additional regiment to be put in the field when the exigency demands it. To provide for these temporary wants is the duty of the Legislature. When the permanent Government of the Confederate States shall go into operation, better protection will be afforded us than we received at the hands of the former United States.

To relieve the State of present indebtedness, and to meet the demands of the future, will receive the earliest attention of the Legislature. We think that a system will be adopted which, based upon State securities, with the payment of interest provided for beyond contingency, as well as a "sinking fund," from the annual revenues, will enable the State to effect a loan, (the Convention having removed the constitutional restriction,) on most favorable terms; and that, too, without incurring the necessity of heavily increased taxation. I cannot, as yet, give you the details of the Bill. Our warrants will then be at par, and the State possess all the means requisite to carry on the government either in peace or war. In a revolution, however, like this, where liberty and self-preservation are the great impelling incentives to action, a patriotic people will not murmur at the burdens of government, if their imposition is necessary to triumph. The Legislature will do all in its power to organize the militia, and to secure arms for our volunteer companies. I think our session will end about the 15th April. In the meantime I will write you. Our delegation is well.

Yours truly,
R. B. Hubbard
